

DAN WILLEY

CHIEF INFORMATION OFFICER

Dan Willey serves as chief information officer (CIO) for Wilbur-Ellis. He joined Wilbur-Ellis in 2008 to manage the new Program Management Office for the Information Technology department and assumed the CIO role in 2011. Willey is responsible for directing technology services for the entire organization. This includes workplace support, communication and collaboration tools, application improvement and support, security and business intelligence. His team ensures Wilbur-Ellis has a solid and reliable platform to conduct business every day.

Before joining Wilbur-Ellis, Willey held a variety of technology roles, including developer, project manager and application support. He has a passion for creating long-term value organizations by providing technology solutions and their effective implementation.

Willey holds a bachelor's degree in Business Administration/Management Information Systems from Eastern Washington University, a master's degree in Business Administration from the University of Phoenix and is a certified Project Management Professional (PMP).

Willey lives in Auburn, Washington, with his wife, Beth. They have four children and eight grandchildren. In his downtime, he enjoys spending time with his family and riding his motorcycle when Washington weather allows.
